Welcome to the Universalist Heritage Center at the Winchester Memorial Church

This is the heart of one of the principal birthplaces of liberal religion in America—the Universalist Heritage Center in Winchester, New Hampshire. Universalist congregations began forming in New England in the late 1770s. By 1794 they extended from Long Island Sound to central Vermont and New Hampshire, and from the Atlantic to Lake Champlain. The majority were in the hill country of central Massachusetts, southern New Hampshire, and southern Vermont. Winchester, New Hampshire is at the center of this region.

It was in the meetinghouse here that Universalists gathered, in 1803, to draft the declaration of faith that came to be known as The Winchester Profession. The Winchester Profession served Universalists for almost a century. It was understood to be included in later declarations of faith, and was never repealed. It is the great-great-grandparent of the Seven Principles of the Unitarian Universalist Association.

Winchester Memorial Church, the building that today houses the Universalist Heritage Center, was built with donations from Universalists across the country to commemorate the Winchester Profession, after the original meetinghouse was lost to fire. Shortly after the 200th anniversary of the Winchester Profession, this historic church became available, and the Universalist Heritage Foundation was founded.

A Home for Our Universalist Heritage

Imagine a home for our Universalist heritage--

Imagine that people from the area gather there regularly for worship, meetings, musical events, conferences, retreats and educational opportunities. Imagine that young people from around the country travel there with their Coming of Age classes. Imagine that tourists visiting in that scenic area stumble upon this place and have their minds and hearts opened to the good news of Universalism.

Imagine that the deep, faithful message that “God is Love,” that hope and forgiveness are powerful and are possible, is kept alive and fresh, and applied creatively to our contemporary realities.

Much of our imagining is already a reality. Today we offer several summer worship services on Universalist themes; an annual sermon award; workshops on Universalism and its philosophy at the UUA General Assembly and District meetings; production of DVDs and other educational material; a Universalist heritage tour through New England; and an initiative to support a new congregation in our Winchester church.
